As respects the condition of this country, we threw into a circular form on the 20th inst. some remarks which we thought appropriate to the existing state of affairs; since then, however, appearances are far from being so favorable, and although nothing positive is known respecting the causes of the delay, yet such is occurring, and already rumors begin to assume so tangible a shape that we may well fear that a much longer time will elapse before the final settlement of difficulties, than we had ventured to hope.
